

2025 ANNUAL REPORT

Advancing Osteopathic
Family Medicine

acofp | AMERICAN COLLEGE
OF OSTEOPATHIC
FAMILY PHYSICIANS

Osteopathic family medicine is an essential specialty with a big impact. The care provided by family doctors goes beyond just the patients they serve, extending outwards to improve the health of families and communities as well. ACOFP works on behalf of our over 25,000 members to promote excellence in osteopathic family medicine through quality education, visionary leadership, and responsible advocacy.

Read on to learn how ACOFP lived out this vision in 2025.

2025: Connection and Community

In 2025, many of us felt a mix of emotions as the practice of medicine became increasingly politicized. Guidelines disappeared, scientific panels were disbanded, and public confusion reigned. I am proud to report that ACOFP kept working on behalf of members, our patients, and our profession. We have never stopped advocating for evidence-based medical care, population health, and osteopathic medicine. This year, we proudly celebrated our 75th anniversary. ACOFP staff did an excellent job commemorating the hard work done by osteopathic physicians over the years, so we can enjoy a smoother path today. The milestones displayed on the large timeline poster were truly inspiring, showcasing many firsts in our profession, including our first Indian American President. I am looking forward to seeing great things to come in the next 75 years.

Osteopathically Yours,

Gautam J. Desai,
DO, FACOFP dist.
2025-2026 ACOFP President

25,000 Professionals Dedicated to Family Medicine

ACOFP is the only organization dedicated to the needs of osteopathic family physicians, and the largest specialty osteopathic organization. ACOFP is member-led, build by the individual efforts of our volunteers and affiliates. Our members tell us that ACOFP is a place where they make genuine connections and find a professional home.

This year marked a remarkable chapter for ACOFP as we celebrated our 75th anniversary.

We closed a very positive fiscal year, strengthened by an impressive number of grants and educational and corporate partnerships. Our work earned special recognition through awards for web design and impactful education (see pages 10 and 14). We launched the Family Physicians DO More Initiative (see page 14), while the Foundation advanced the Family Medicine Forward campaign, introduced a second Future Leaders Conference, and established a new mentorship program (see pages 15-19). Other new educational initiatives included an obesity certificate, digital badging, and preparation for CME at Sea (see pages 8-10). ACOFP also had an incredibly busy year in the advocacy realm (see page 6). My profound thanks to all of our volunteers, the student association, residents, and affiliate societies, as well as, of course, our staff and Board of Directors, for an extraordinary year.

Leadership

"Watching other physicians occupying leadership roles within my own state made me understand the need for people to step up and be committed to a cause and be willing to work to facilitate change and direction." –Joan Grzybowski, DO, FACOFP

"Healthcare is vast. There are so many ways to serve, so many gaps to fill. Finding your own alignment between service and self-preservation is what it is all about." –Sarah J. Wolff, DO, FACOFP, ACOFP Leadership Development Committee

"I connected with other family medicine physicians, remembering why I wanted to be in this specialty from the beginning. We are a group that can do amazing things."

"ACOFP really helps us incorporate the osteopathic principles and practices into our medical practices. Osteopathy must be experienced to be fully understood."

"It was very powerful to me to be at a convention with so many other family doctor DOs. I am isolated as a rural family doctor, and it was very empowering and uplifting."

"I appreciated the variety of lectures from billing to new medications pending. Medicine is constantly changing, and we need to be able to do the same."

This new campaign is the latest phase in a 5-year project supported by the American Board of Family Medicine Foundation's Family Medicine NEXT. Geared towards students still deciding on a career path, Family Physicians DO More launched in July 2025.

- Elements from all the teams at the 2024 Think Tank session inspired the final design.
- 18 osteopathic family physicians are highlighted in the "Day in the Life" video series.
- Infographics visualize the complex process of becoming a physician.

- An interactive quiz helps users determine whether they are a good fit.
- An information hub busts myths and provides the data supporting the family medicine model of care.
- Dedicated Facebook and Instagram accounts for the campaign.

The site design won Gold in the education category of the 21st Davey Awards.

In 2025, the Foundation successfully built on existing momentum. The Family Medicine Forward Campaign is already providing tangible support to early-career physicians. Our osteopathic board certification support initiatives break down barriers at critical career milestones. We also continued the Foundation's impact through new scholarships and recognition.

The Foundation connects early-career physicians to the osteopathic family medicine profession and grow patient access to AOA Board Certified osteopathic family physicians. Physicians who participate in our programs are prepared to lead and advocate for change in our healthcare systems.

This progress is only possible because of our generous donors. This belief in the mission ensures that the profession will continue to thrive for generations to come.
